

WISGOP Update

--Tomorrow's the big day! Republicans around the state will work to make 65,000 phone calls and knock on 6,500 doors as we head into the final 100 days of the campaign. Saturday, July 24, from 9am-9pm, we will be contacting voters across Wisconsin, and we need your help! Click here to sign up for the 100-Day Dash – if you can spare 3 hours, or whatever you can do, it will help Republicans march toward victory in November!

--In case you missed it, the Democrats launched the dumbest, most backward political attack of the year yesterday. In a press release, the Democrats blatantly lied about the Republicans' role in Jim Doyle's raid of the Patients Compensation Fund, and actually included a baseless political attack, calling Mike Huebsch "not man enough" to withstand the Democrats' "influences." Read more...

-- The Dems are trying desperately to cover up Julie Lassa's record. Julie Lassa's camp continued its negative campaign against Sean Duffy today, using a tenuous link and some flawed logic in their ongoing attempt to smear Sean Duffy. This is Dirty Politics 101. Instead of talking about the issues Wisconsin really cares about: jobs, runaway spending, government debt and the direction of our country, the Democrats are focused 100 percent on bashing Sean Duffy. -- Charlie Rangel was formally charged with "multiple ethics violations" by the House ethics panel. But Wisconsin Congressman Steve Kagen (D-Green Bay) has accepted $21,000 in campaign contributions from the corrupt Rangel. Think he'll return it? Read more...

--When Congress decided to spend nearly a trillion dollars on their failed stimulus plan, many hoped that it would at least get spent on permanent infrastructure projects. Strangely enough some of these projects involve states replacing paved roads with gravel or other rough surfaces. Questionable projects aside, a troubling trend is emerging: important projects in McCain-voting areas are getting pushed to the side for less worthy projects in Obama territory. Overall, a disproportionately high number of funds are going to areas that voted in high numbers for Barack Obama in the last election compared to areas that voted with John McCain.
